

The federal government plans to introduce compulsory registration for all sex workers

Count us out!

According to proposals by the Minister for Family Affairs, Manuela Schwesig (SPD), all sex workers will in future have to register and/or deregister with every local council under the terms of repressive new prostitution regulations. This is supposedly for their protection!

Sex workers have never demanded this “protection” from the government!

Further deliberations at the hearing before the Ministry for Family Affairs on 12th June 2014 in Berlin also led to proposals for a “central prostitution register” including “prostitution cards with photo identification” for sex workers.

The objective of the compulsory registration planned by the government is to create a complete movement profile for women working as prostitutes. This is about surveillance, not protection. The obligation to register means that such women are subject to further restrictions of their civil rights.

We recall that the last state-imposed registration of prostitutes took place under the National Socialists in 1939 in accordance with a decree from the Minister of the Interior for the German Reich! Has the government learned nothing from history?

We hereby declare that as long as sex workers are still legally discriminated against and socially stigmatized by countless special provisions in criminal and police law and laws concerning foreigners, and are thereby denied the same treatment as other professional groups, those affected are fully entitled to protect their anonymity.

No other professional group in this country is forced to register in this way. Compulsory registration means compulsory outing! Or being forced into the grey area of illegality! It's a choice between cholera and the plague.

Our response to this is:

No! Count us out!
